

Hi. I'm Linda Mokeme. When I was first approached by the Neothink Society in the fall of 2004, I was in desperate need of help. In November 1984 I was paralyzed on the entire left side of my body. After two weeks of extensive testing, medical doctors diagnosed me as having multiple sclerosis.

When I was introduced to the Neothink Society, I was not happy. Applying the techniques that I've learned through the Neothink Society has taught me how to be happy. By 2004 I had been separated from my husband for nine years. Applying the techniques that I learned through the Neothink literature, I manifested my international divorce and it didn't cost me anything. I lost weight, I went from a size 16 to a size 12. The Neothink literature has taught me how to be happy.

Ten years of coordinating exhilarating Neothink Clubhouse meetings in the Chicago area has empowered me with the Neothink mentality. I had searched the globe looking for happiness, through the Neothink Society I've learned how to be happy. After two decades of trying to write my autobiography, I'm thankful to share that I'm in the process of publishing my autobiography. The name of my autobiography is Reclaiming Joy.

I read the Neothink literature a minimum of 15 minutes every day.
